

February 17, 2026: On Its Time for a Kash Withdraw

Let's get right to the point: The investigations into our latest high profile crimes are being botched and made worse by an incompetent clog at the FBI. 'Cash Paddle' Kash Patel is not qualified to lead the team at the FBI and needs to withdraw from his position as a politically-motivated and unsuccessful appointee of the ring-master and kkk-karnival clown, Ronald 'the Mac Donald John' Chump.

Let's discuss.

Crimes are being played out now - in the media - for attention - with real world and real life consequences as if they are some sort of game to a sick group of losers portraying themselves as a 'numbers gang' (at least that's the title that they gave themselves to me when they approached me and threatened me with one of their low-life extorted losers in my own front yard)(I passed this information to the 'police' and they treated me as a target that is in need of counseling)(Thanks, cops, please continue 'investigating' your more important crimes like Drunken Donnie and Drugged-Out Noema while ignoring the relevant clues that I was providing you).

FBI Director Kash Patel posted on X in November that his agency had seen an almost 500% increase in arrests associated with the movement. "This is among the most important issues in America and we won't stop working," he wrote.

Court records show in the last year, numerous other members of 764 and similar groups have been charged with exploiting and harming minors. (ME TO POLICE: 'They called themselves the numbers gang')(Police to me: blank stares)

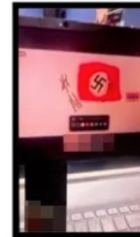

In April, authorities arrested two alleged 764 leaders living in North Carolina and Greece who authorities said recruited followers with images of child sexual abuse and then guided them to extort girls into self-harm.

In October, authorities filed a superseding indictment against 21-year-old Baron Cain Martin of Arizona, accusing him of membership in 764 and other groups and exploiting children – including a 13-year-old girl who carved swastikas into her body at his direction. He has pleaded not guilty.

(ME TO POLICE: 'He had a gun and shot it in my front yard!')(Police to me: eye-rolls, while a nearby car beeps at us both to say we are BOTH being 'Watched Over') In December, 19-year-old Alexis Aldair Chavez of Texas, who helped lead a related nihilistic network called 8884, pleaded guilty to racketeering and multiple acts involving sexual exploitation of children.

Who identifies as the 'hunted' and the 'hunter'? Who identifies as the 'lion'? Who are the real Nazis? Who have we been seeing espouse Nazi viewpoints?

Investigate your boss, Cash Paddle! (And since you cannot, it is time for 'KASH' to 'WITHDRAW')

Some cases cross international borders.

'a nihilistic PHILOSOPHY' (Philosophy is not a subject taught at the academy in Can't Quantico, is it? (But I have been speaking PHILO for years now, huh?)

In Fort Worth, Texas, a 17-year-old named Evan Banda allegedly lit multiple cars on fire in December and had discussed plans for mass murder after connecting with an international group that has a "nihilistic" philosophy. Local police said Banda told them he discussed potential school shootings with the group and participated in the recording of a video of a local school that featured a caption stating the group would "kill a lot of children."

Unfortunately, these Nazis that compose an international numbers gang (ahem, Freed Masons, spreading Ass-Fault, and Dick Mortar across the planet) are playing a 'game' with the lives of the world's children ('It's a kkk-k clown that eats the children!')

KID KILLER Inside twisted 'love game' that drove sisters to their deaths as cops probe mystery 'app' that gives kids shady 'tasks'

For someone that feels 'hunted' and like they are 'alone' (ahem, the Chump), these games can become 'addictive' as 'emotional validation more than entertainment' (Where else are we seeing 'rewards tied to relationships' and 'emotional validation more than mere entertainment'?)(I know what I saw 5 days ago south of the border and I was told to shut up")

"When these rewards are tied to relationships – such as experiences of feeling chosen, approval, or affection – the brain could register them as emotional validation more than mere entertainment."

"This would be why games that reward emotional attachment, such as 'love games', can become particularly addictive."

Jookyong added: "For someone who feels lonely, isolated, or emotionally unsupported offline, the game may partially substitute for real-world sources of emotional validation and connection."

emotionally detached and childish losers that like to torture and abuse people for fun, amusement, or 'retribution'?)

Who else is 'addicted to their phone', Kash? Can you think of anyone that fits this description? Nazi, numbers game, alone, emotional validation, addicted to phone, international movements and influence, etc.? Well, golly-gee, who could be leading such a major worldwide network? Ahem, have you checked the Pentagon? (Motive, MEANS, opportunity.)(Us 'normal' criminals are not this sophisticated, Kash. This is high-level criminality coming from 'high level' sources - LOOK UP!)

PASS THIS INFORMATION ON TO YOUR PROFILERS, KASH, BECAUSE YOU ARE OUT OF YOUR DEPTHS NOW.

Clinical psychologist Shweta Sharma said children start out in such games with a "curiosity to prove something under peer pressure"

"At each stage of the game, there is a constant need to prove yourself," she told India's NDTV.

"These children cannot understand proper emotional regulation. They have a strong need to be seen, need to be acknowledged."

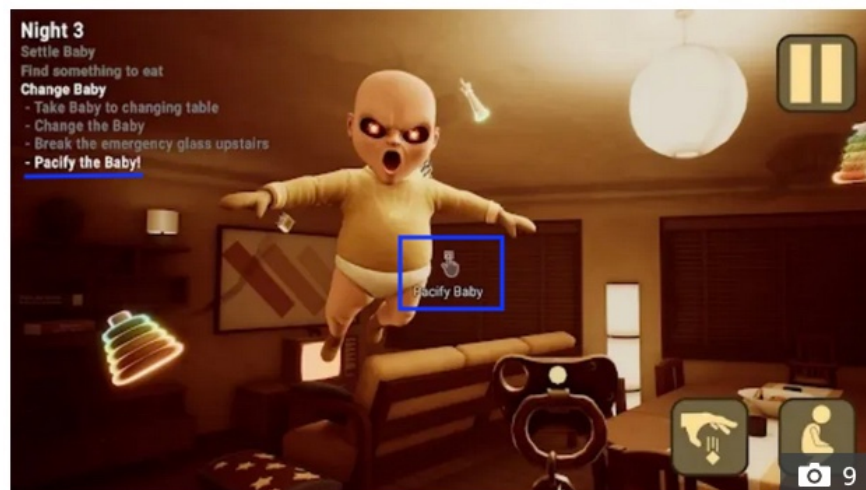

#TeamChump)(Howaboutyou, Kash? Did you have to 'prove yourself' to become the 'boss'?)

This looks like a case, for the 'spiritual' expertise of someone who knows a little bit more about true evil than the author of a book called 'Government Gansters')

Evil Nun is among the most disturbing games mentioned by the half-sisters

My house is literally haunted by an evil spirit that is manifesting itself as a 'secret' voice from inside of our military and government. Hmmm. . . there are a lot of 'direct' and 'straightforward' connections here. Maybe I should investigate the criminals inside of the Pentagon? Nah, let's go search Carlos' house again!

The Baby in Yellow features an eerie soundtrack and several jump scares during the gameplay as players complete routine tasks as a babysitter while paranormal events occur

Players take up the role of a former employee returning to an abandoned toy factory which is now overrun by evil animated toys.

Gamers have to evade being caught by the toys by solving puzzles in order to stay alive.

The Baby in Yellow features an eerie soundtrack and several jump scares during the gameplay as players complete routine tasks as a babysitter while paranormal events occur.

Evil Nun is among the most disturbing games mentioned by the half-sisters.

Set inside a zombie-infected school, players must solve puzzles to save trapped kids being held under a nun's spell.

Ice Scream sees an ice cream man kidnapping children and freezing them in the back of his truck.

Players must unlock clues by sneaking around the town to save the kids.

All four games appear to have similar themes of kidnapping, fantasy settings and the idea of escaping.

By the way, since you have been so very active in your search process, what exactly is the standard by which you use to 'search and seize' evidence of a probable crime these days? Are you still filing affidavits that state this container has 'cause' to 'believe' it was 'probably' used in a crime? If there is 'probably cause', then why is there no actual results? I watch a TON of crime docs and very rarely, if ever, catch a glimpse of search warrants being executed that yield no actual results (usually those are save for later - you know, once you determine the real suspect)(But, hey, I'm just a - former - criminal defense attorney sidelined from his occupation by the criminal surveillance of his criminal government - what they fuck do I know about the law or investigations - I didn't write any books about the mafia that runs our government!)

This 'search' looks like an episode of 'DragNet'. Why not just run a keyword search on your illegal surveillance 'dragnet' database? (Are we really willing to expend all of our water resources storing our personal data for a government that only uses it to extort us? I don't think we should be using up our nation's water supply for such a petty operation - but that is all beside the point.)

◆ AI Overview

The Fourth Amendment standard for search and seizure is that all government-initiated searches and seizures must be reasonable. Generally, a reasonable search requires a warrant based on probable cause, supported by oath or affirmation, and specifically describing the place to be searched and the items or persons to be seized.

Key Aspects of the Search and Seizure Standard:

- Reasonable Expectation of Privacy: The Fourth Amendment applies when the government violates a person's legitimate or reasonable expectation of privacy.
- Warrant Requirement: Searches of a home without a warrant are presumptively unreasonable.
- Probable Cause: This is the standard for obtaining a warrant, requiring facts that would lead a reasonable officer to believe a crime has occurred or evidence exists in that location.

Police have released a man hours after they detained him in connection to the disappearance of Nancy Guthrie, the mother of US news anchor Savannah Guthrie, CBS News, the BBC's US partner, has reported.

After taking the man into custody at a traffic stop, police searched his home in Rio Rico, south of Tucson, Arizona, sources familiar with the investigation told CBS News.

After his release, the man, identified only as Carlos, told reporters outside his home that he did not know who Nancy Guthrie was. "I don't follow the news," he said.

Well, 'Carlos' I do follow the news and this entire operation smells like a rotten fish. It's time to clean up this real-life mess with a #KashWithdraw! (Not a 'Cash' Withdraw)

Seriously, look again at the facts: messages being sent through the media (attention-seeker? Check!); demanding money for information about a person's human life (morally bankrupt yet seeking earthly riches? Check!); and playing a game with our emotional attachments and relationships? (Check! Check! Check!)

'Cash-Paddle' Kash Patel, you need to advise your 'media' partners and your 'public-relations' specialists to stop encouraging this type of publicity-seeking money-grabbing conduct before you being encouraging these losers to continue doing these types of evil operations.

Or better yet, It's time for a #KashWithdraw because you are in too deep, you are owned and controlled, and you are incompetent to lead such a team of investigators. #KashWithdraw because #KashistheClog.

Federal agents and sheriff's deputies streamed into the quiet desert subdivision by night. They stepped past spiky agave plants and surrounded a house, preparing to serve a search warrant. A couple of miles away, investigators descended on a parked Range Rover and draped it with evidence tape.

For the second time in the excruciating weeks since Nancy Guthrie vanished, Friday's burst of law enforcement activity in a southern Arizona neighborhood signaled a possible break in a case that has transfixed the country.

But, once again, the authorities later announced a disappointing result: Even after one person was questioned and the S.U.V. was towed away, no arrests had been made and there had been no trace of the 84-year-old Ms. Guthrie.

As a member of the community that is being subjected to ongoing illegal searches and seizures of my own life, I would like to encourage the FIBS to pinpoint their searches with better precision so that they are more effective at finding the culprits than they are at shaping a narrative that they are 'vigorously' out searching and doing their (over-paid) jobs.

Here's a lead: Go check with the Ringmaster, he seems to have inside knowledge about this case that remains to be disclosed.
